Profile

Molecular Nutrition & Food Research is a primary research journal devoted to health, safety and all aspects of molecular nutrition such as nutritional biochemistry, nutrigenomics and metabolomics. Its scope is to emphasise medically-relevant topics, linking the information arising from related disciplines:

Bioactivity & Safety: Nutritional and medical effects of food constituents including integrated risk/benefit evaluations.

Immunology: Understanding the interactions of food and the immune system.

Microbiology: Food spoilage, food pathogens, chemical and physical approaches of fermented foods and novel microbial processes.

Chemistry: Isolation and analysis of bioactive food ingredients while considering environmental aspects.

Besides the regular contributions, Molecular Nutrition & Food Research also publishes special issues devoted to current topics from one of the above-mentioned fields, plus annual review issues.
